Under a dreary autumn sky,
I turn the pages of a book of sweets Jam-filled cookies sparkle off the page, gleaming like jewels Raspberry streaks crimson, apricot exudes orange When I was little, opening up a box of sweet treats made my heart dance
Now, dipping into those memories,
I drop dollops of jam on the dough
Sweet smells of butter waft through the air And with that first whiff comes a soft beam of light A gentle hint that the clouds are soon to lift

I look through the window and watch the rain drizzle down, long and steady
The leaves begin their autumnal transformation in hazy blue hues The cat scurries around the room in curious pursuit of a ball of yarn And, sitting in my grandmother's chair,
I knit and unknit the same spot
Of a crocheted tapestry that might take forever and a day to finish
